

Consulting group teams with IBM to offer Visual Warehouse product

ORANGE, Calif. - "We're making solid progress toward developing a promising marketing partnership with IBM," says VCS Director, Dan Rimkus. "We already are an IBM implementations partner in 11 Western states."

Volt Consulting Services teamed with IBM to roll out IBM's new Data Mart Product, known as "Visual Warehouse."

And there's plenty of room for optimism. Data Warehousing, which is what the Data Mart is about, entails a hot new concept that has the information systems world abuzz with possibilities. The Visual Warehouse lets companies integrate a score of cutting-edge technologies to create their own supermarkets of information.

VCS already has installed Visual Warehouse at Carle Clinics, a medical insurance company, in Urbana, Illinois; at Fairfield Communities, a resort and time management company, in Little Rock, Ark.; and at California State University Fullerton, which provides curriculum management with Internet access.

Side benefits for Volt come with free PR and advertising. IBM's brochures, distributed nationally, now present VCS as a preferred business partner. Finally, DB2 magazine, a great read for IS professionals, featured VCS in its Spring 97 issue as an IBM implementations partner in an article called visualizing the Data Warehouse.■

CELEBRATING SAFETY - Regional Manager Sunny Simms (right) and Regional Trainer Marilyn (ox enjoy a gala luncheon held by Columbia Pacific Aluminum (City of Industry, Calif.) celebrating one million staff hours without a lost time accident. The event was attended by all employees.

