

WORDS ARE THE KEYS TO THE MEANING OF A SENTENCE

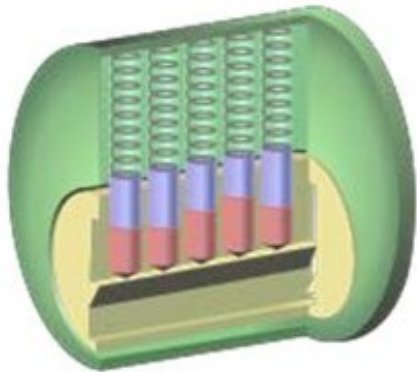

I want to say a word about the English language... any language I suppose.

“Words” are the keys to the meaning of a sentence.

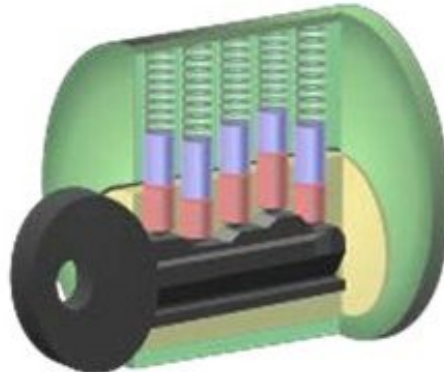

Some words, like keys, fit but still don't unlock the meaning, don't turn the lock, of the sentence.

Illustration:

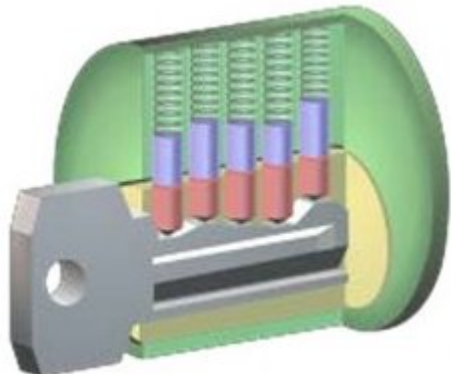

Pin tumbler lock

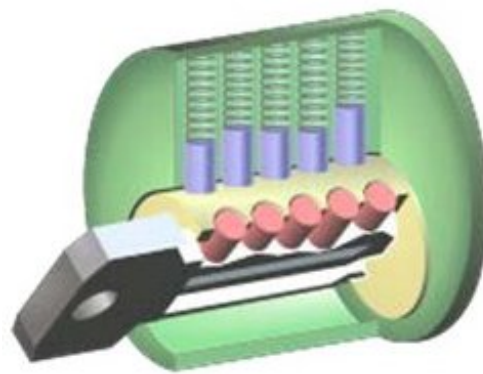

Without a key in the lock, the driver pins (blue) are pushed downwards, preventing the plug (yellow) from rotating

When an incorrect key is inserted into the lock, the key pins (red) and driver pins (blue) do not align with the shear line; therefore, it does not allow the plug (yellow) to rotate.

When the correct key is inserted, the gaps between the key pins (red) and driver pins (blue) align with the edge of the plug (yellow).

With the gaps between the pins aligned with the shear line, the plug (yellow) can rotate freely.

Please click on this link to continue. Thanks.

<http://home.earthlink.net/~rubybur/Words%20are%20keys%20full%20article.pdf>

When looking at all these pages to follow, remember to click on the underlined text to go to the links. Use your back button to return to where you were reading last.